

The North Dakota CattleWomen (NDCW) is a non-profit organization committed to promoting BEEF and supporting the beef industry through advocacy, education, and community outreach.

We provide educational programs and consumer promotions that highlight the nutritional benefits of beef and the importance of the beef industry in our daily lives. From classroom activities with students to public events across the state, our goal is to share accurate, engaging information about beef from pasture to plate.

NDCW proudly serves as:

- Auxiliary of the North Dakota Stockmen's Association
- Affiliate of the American National CattleWomen
- Nine districts statewide. (five active: Districts 1, 4, 5, 6, and 7).
- Membership open to all (active or inactive districts)
- Your membership supports our statewide outreach, education, and advocacy efforts.

For 75 years, the mission of the North Dakota CattleWomen has remained steadfast:
To enhance and sustain the demand for beef while promoting a positive and accurate image of the beef industry.

As a volunteer-driven organization, CattleWomen across the nation—and right here in North Dakota—work tirelessly to educate both youth and adults about the value of beef and the essential role our industry plays in agriculture, health, and nutrition.

Our members proudly represent the beef industry at a variety of outreach and educational events, including:

- Trade shows and community fairs
- NDSF Military Appreciation Lunch
- Cook-offs and beef tastings
- Classroom book readings and agricultural presentations
- Middle School/High School class presentations
- Kindergarten Day, Life on the Farm, and Ag Education Days
- Donations of accurate, age-appropriate beef books to school and public libraries
- One-on-one consumer engagement and advocacy

These are just a few examples of how North Dakota CattleWomen share our mission, values, and passion for beef—making a lasting impact across the state and inspiring the next generation of beef advocates.
